Artist Biography

Jan Carson pays homage to nature's details and reconstructs fleeting moments in her mobiles.

In 2002, Carson was a finalist for the prestigious NICHE Award, honoring excellence and innovation in American and Canadian craft. Since 1999 she has been the artist and owner of Moon-Lily Silk Mobiles, the name under which she created a line of popular kinetic sculptures sold in galleries, boutiques and museum stores throughout the U.S. Among the distinguished galleries carrying her work are The Real Mother Goose (Portland, OR); New Morning Gallery (Asheville, NC); The Escape (Georgetown, TX); and Mackerel Sky (East Lansing, MI).

Carson's fiber works have also been featured in juried, invitational, and solo exhibitions and are in numerous private collections. She has recently begun creating larger, commissioned pieces for corporations and public spaces.

As a student, Carson was awarded an internship at Universal Limited Art Editions, one of the premier print workshops in the country. She received her M.F.A. in fibers under Tom Lundberg at Colorado State University and her undergraduate degree from Oklahoma State University.

Carson, who lives in Fort Collins, Colorado, was born in Bartlesville, Oklahoma.
